

United Nations Association of the National Capital Area
2020–2021 ANNUAL REPORT

A Letter From Stephen F. Moseley

Dear UNA-NCA members and colleagues. I want to express my sincere thanks to all of you for the opportunity to have served UNA-NCA in a number of volunteer roles over the past 10 years. This week we are presenting the election results for new and continuing Board Members beginning on June 15, 2021, including the election of Jill Christianson as Chair of the Board. This will be a smooth transition into experienced hands with Jill's several years of UNA-NCA Board service and a long and successful career within the National Education Association as a Senior Analyst for International Relations with initiatives across the globe with Education International. Also, Paula Boland, our President, will continue her excellent leadership of the organization and serving as Chair of the UNA-USA National Council.

Over the past decade, I have had great pleasure to serve as a volunteer at UNA-NCA in the roles of Advisory Council Chair; Co-Chair of our Sustainable Development Task Force; and then as President-elect and subsequently as President (re-named Board Chair), over the past four years. This has truly been a chance of a lifetime after retiring in 2011 from a 45-year career with several non-profit organizations and associations devoted to international development serving countries around the world. I have been very fortunate to also have the advice and guidance of the four Past Board Chairs, who have lifetime appointments on the Board.

This past decade we have all seen the remarkable depth of substance in the range of programs to address a growing need for more citizen engagement to strengthen the U.S. partnership with the United Nations led by UNA-NCA, one of the largest and oldest of over 200 UNA-USA chapters across the country. Our more than 1,000 members include seasoned professionals who have long careers in international and multilateral agencies, business leaders, and other association and university leaders. More than half of our membership are students and young professionals who are already leading many of our programs and participating in the Board and its Executive Committee. In many ways the range of UNA-NCA program activities addressing human rights, peace and security, health and education development, international law, and young professional career advancement needs has remained the bedrock of our programs. These specific programs have been paralleled continuously with the UNA-NCA flagship education program, Global Classrooms DC, serving over 1,000 middle and high school students each year in grades 5 to 12 in the DMV area and around the world; and a unique Graduate Fellows Program for 25 to 35 students each year from area universities in the greater Washington Area devoted to in depth analysis of the operations and policy work of the UN over the past 75 years.

With the advent and adoption by 193 UN member states of the 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) in 2015, UNA-NCA has increasingly defined its program offerings and emphasis to reflect this integrated framework of key issues that countries and people must address together for survival and opportunity for better lives and peace. With the original 15-year target to accomplish most of the goals by 2030, now we are trying to assess the interruption and setback to accomplishing some of these goals due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Also, these challenges have enhanced our understanding and commitment to be addressing the SDGs for equity and inclusion, poverty alleviation, climate change, violence, and many other common objectives for both local citizens and those in countries around the world. This approach to addressing common local and global needs through UNA-NCA programs is now a hallmark of our work that will remain so in the years ahead.

Clearly during the period of the last four years, the past U.S. administration challenged many of the tenants of global cooperation: the support for principles in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the shared responsibility for cooperation in economic development between rich and poor countries, and the overriding need for climate change policies for the survival of our planet and people everywhere. The practical implication of those failures of global and national leadership in the U.S. and many other countries has undermined many of the long-term investments needed for the SDGs and immediate threats from war and mass refugee migration, and the worsening of the climate degradation. UNA-NCA is a non-partisan, non-profit organization, which uses the best tools of citizenship education and advocacy for the principles of global cooperation, and to foster the U.S. commitment to pay for its fair share and obligations to the UN budget and operations, including long term peacekeeping missions under UN auspices.

In June of 2021 a new national budget has been sent to Congress by the Biden-Harris Administration which includes commitments to repair some of the damage done to the accomplishment of the goals addressing poverty, education, health, climate, peacebuilding, and peacekeeping. Passage by Congress before September 30, 2021 is essential for these and other global funding commitments to UN agencies, and many other critical programs under the auspices of the UN and operated with U.S. cooperation. In addition, I hope we will advocate to join the new call for a significant multinational consortium of UN and national agencies in the G-7 and G-22 meetings this month to pay for and deliver the critical vaccines and public health vaccination services needed to save more than 3 to 5 billion people and to avoid the further risk of collapse of national economies, which would also have devastating consequences to our own prosperity and safety.

The new leadership of UNA-NCA is strong, able to continue its mission, and face new challenges and crises which may arise in the future, just as its Board and staff have successfully sustained and expanded our programs and progress during the COVID-19 pandemic over the past 15 months of emergency operations. Indeed, the organization has balanced its budgets for the past four years, and enhanced dramatically its operating and endowment funds thanks to the generosity of many donors.

Please join me in congratulating Jill for her election to Board Chair, and to the continuing and new Board members. Thank you all for the privilege I have had to serve UNA-NCA with my fellow board members, President Paula Boland, and her excellent staff and hundreds of volunteers from our membership.

What is GCDC?

Established in 2003, Global Classrooms® DC (GCDC) is UNA-NCA's flagship education program. GCDC uses Model UN to introduce students grades 5-12 to the work of the United Nations and international issues. Through teaching experiences, Model UN Conferences, and partnerships with UN agencies and the U.S. Department of State, GCDC equips the next generation of globally aware citizens.

Spring Model UN Conference

April 2021

In the first ever virtual Spring Conference, about 200 students, educators, volunteers, and guests gathered for an immersive conference experience. Students heard from high level officials, including Secretary of State Blinken and UNA-USA Youth Observer Dustin Liu, and discussed some of the world's most pressing international issues while acquiring skills to become effective global citizens.

EMPOWERING THE NEXT GENERATION OF GLOBAL CITIZENS

In 2021, GCDC and the UNA-NCA Advocacy team launched the Emerging Leaders Fellowship. The inaugural cohort includes 19 students, ranging from sixth graders to college undergraduates.

Seeing the World With a UN Lens

"GFP's use of a UN lens means that we look at global challenges from the perspective of UN leadership - from the inside. It means that whether it is global pandemic, conflict-driven migration, or the UN's Sustainable Development Goals, we see issues from the standpoint of the global community, rather than from the perspective of an individual country or interest group. It means that we work together to envision new strategies, partners and possibilities for international cooperation where others may only see obstacles."

- Nancy Donaldson & A. Edward Elmendorf, GFP Co-Directors

UNA-NCA's Graduate Fellows Program (GFP) offers a semester-long engagement to graduate and post-graduate students competitively selected from DC-area universities. During the 2021 Program, GFP Fellows had the option of participating in SDG training offered to UN staff, engaged with volunteer mentors operating at senior levels in their fields, and participated in weekly explorations of global challenges confronting the UN system alongside U.S. and UN officials. For the 2021 spring semester, GFP pivoted to a virtual platform and focused the curriculum on the UN's response to COVID-19. From early January until May, thirty-three students originating from fifteen countries shared in a journey towards better understanding the UN system, and how, as professionals, they can define their path towards UN-related careers.

SHAPING OUR FUTURE TOGETHER

2020's UN Month events commemorated the 75th anniversary of the UN with numerous events and initiatives. Among them, UNA-NCA hosted a special program entitled "UN75 Coffee Chat: The Future We Want," featuring Congressman Jamie Raskin (D-MD-8), and Ambassadors Donald T. Bliss (ret.), Steven McGann, Sarah Mendelson, and Susan Page that explored how the sustainable development goals' can unlock a just, equitable, and prosperous future. UNA-NCA also hosted a series of UN75 Consultations in D.C., Maryland, and Virginia in response to UN Secretary General Guterres' call for a global conversation on how to build a better future for all.

UN75: Past. Present. Progress. Building the Future We Want

For its 2020 UN Day event on October 27th, UNA-NCA marked the 75th anniversary of the UN by hosting “UN at 75: Past. Present. Progress. Building the Future We Want,” a virtual gathering celebrating and examining the future of the UN. The event included keynote remarks by Ulrika Modéer of the United Nations Development Program, a moderated discussion between UNA-NCA President Paula Boland, Ms. Modéer, and Dr. Robert Orr, Special Advisor to the UN Secretary-General on Climate Change, and the presentation of the 2020 UNA-NCA Edison W. Dick Advocacy Award to Congresswoman Barbara Lee (D-CA-13). Participants took part in breakout sessions to discuss issues like global health, sustainable development, and gender equity.

On December 10, UNA-NCA hosted its annual Human Rights Awards Reception virtually. This event correlated with the 71st anniversary of the adoption of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, as well as Human Rights Day.

The virtual event was attended by more than 250 individuals. This year's unique setting allowed attendees to join remotely and participate in this celebration of Human Rights work.

The awardees shared their fascinating and important work in the field of Human Rights, inspiring their colleagues, UNA-NCA members, supporters, and anyone who has attended the event to continue their commitment to promoting Human Rights globally and locally. Award recipients and attendees also enjoyed performances by Bathsheba Smithen, founder of Cage Free Voices'.

Program Highlights

UNA-NCA's 2020-2021 programming year was unlike any seen before. And yet, a programming year that far exceeded all expectations. Though the restrictions placed on in-person gatherings limited our and other organizations in many ways, it also enabled our entire programming year to be made available not just to those who live in our jurisdiction, but the entire world.

Our programming addressed twelve of the seventeen Global Goals across more than a dozen events attracting over 1,500 attendees and raising our organization over $25,000.

See below for some of the themes and issues that UNA-NCA programming covered.
